About The Crescent Medical Practice

<https://www.crescentmedicalpractice.org.uk>

The Crescent Medical Practice was established c.1968. We have two partners, five salaried GPs, a practice pharmacist, and a practice nurse. As a training practice we have a regular presence of specialist GP trainees as part of the clinical team. The ten-strong non-clinical team comprises assistant Practice Manager, dedicated administrative and front-of-house teams.

We benefit from the service provided by the HSCP-employed pharmacotherapy, physiotherapy and Links practitioner teams.

We are based over two sites, and we own our own premises. Our Walmer Crescent surgery is located in a curved tenement building designed by one of Glasgow's most famous architects, Alexander "Greek" Thomson. Cessnock is an area in the city of Glasgow south of the River Clyde.

Cessnock's main street is Paisley Road West, which runs west in the direction of Paisley and east through Kinning Park to Paisley Toll. This area is served by Cessnock subway station. Many buses stop on Paisley Road West, most frequently the Number 9 route, offering fast access east-bound to City Centre, and west-bound to Govan and Paisley.

Our Hillington surgery is on Hillington Road South, 3 miles from Walmer Crescent. Public transport facilities locally include regular bus services on Paisley Road West with frequent rail travel to nearby train stations. There are also good road links to the M8 Motorway.

We have a mixed socio-economic demographic. We are well-served by The Queen Elizabeth University Hospital and the Royal Alexandra Hospital, and we are actively involved with local quality improvement initiatives as an active member of the local GP cluster.

Practice Partners:

Drs Amy Kerr and Caroline Oates joined the practice in 2005 and, following the planned retirement of their predecessors, became partners in 2010. They are both GP trainers who enjoy championing GP as the most valuable and rewarding specialty in medicine. They strive to deliver excellent care and service to patients and recognise that this requires the highest standards of clinical care as well as business management. They aim to provide an enjoyable and stimulating environment for the practice team to identify and develop their professional skills.
